

January 20, 2009

Dear Costco Member:

Costco's records indicate that you purchased Austin® and/or Keebler® branded Peanut Butter Sandwich Crackers between July 1, 2008 and January 12, 2009. Kellogg Company has issued a voluntary recall of all Austin® and Keebler® branded Peanut Butter Sandwich Crackers because the products have the potential to be contaminated with Salmonella. No other Kellogg, Keebler, Austin or Famous Amos products sold at Costco are included in this recall.

While Costco has removed affected product off its shelves, we are sending you this letter to ensure that customers who have any of this product return it to the store where it was purchased from for a full refund. You can find specific product details and other information at www.keebler.com.

Salmonella is an organism which can cause serious and sometimes fatal infections in young children, frail or elderly people, and others with weakened immune systems. Healthy persons infected with Salmonella often experience fever, diarrhea, nausea, vomiting and abdominal pain.

We sincerely apologize to our consumers, and cannot express enough our disappointment and deep regret about this situation. The food industry upholds certain operating standards, and we are proud that we exceed these standards in our facilities. Recent events suggest there was a breach in our supplier's process that is unacceptable to Kellogg. We are taking the aggressive steps necessary to reassure you and regain your confidence before these products are reintroduced to the market.

Consumers with additional questions may contact the Kellogg Recall Hotline at 877-869-5633. Consumers with questions or concerns about their health should contact their doctor.

Sincerely,

Brian H Huff

Vice President & General Manager
